Holy Father calls for Prayer for Peace in Middle East

VATICAN CITY, July 16, 2006 (vis) – After praying the Angelus with the faithful gathered in front of the house at Les Combes in Italy's Valle d'Aosta region which he is spending a brief holiday, the Pope called on people to pray for peace in the Holy Land.

News coming from the Holy Land over the last few days is, said the Holy Father, “a cause of new and serious concern to everyone, especially for the increasing military activities in Lebanon and for the many victims among the civilian population. At the root of such pitiless contrasts there are, unfortunately, objective... violations of rights and of justice. But neither terrorist acts or reprisals, especially when they have such tragic consequences on the civilian population, can be justified. Bitter experience shows that by following this path no positive results can be achieved.

“Today,” he added, “is dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel, a mountain in the Holy Land which, just a few kilometers from Lebanon, dominates the Israeli city of Haifa, also recently attacked.

“Let us pray to Mary Queen of Peace,” said Benedict XVI, “that she may implore from God the fundamental gift of harmony, bringing political leaders back to the way of reason and opening new possibilities of dialogue and understanding. With this in mind, I invite the local Churches to raise special prayers for peace in the Holy Land and in the entire Middle East.”

Young Church – Children's corner :- Mark 6:30–34, Jesus the Good Shepherd.

What a beautiful Gospel we have today. When the disciples told Jesus about everything they had done he saw that they needed to take time out and invited them to rest for a while.

Activity: As followers of Jesus we too must reach out to others. Think about those in your home, school, or neighbourhood who are sometimes forgotten, ignored or made fun of. Step in, as Jesus would, welcome them into the “fold” and show them friendship. Use not more than twenty words to describe your “fold” and how you welcome others into it.
